Monday, April 2, 2001 - 10:00 AM

To my son,

"What is there to be added to what has been said? What is noticed is distressing in both situations. Keep your spirits up, my son, the wheel swings round, unforeseen solutions arise for cases that seemed desperate. Every good thing created on Earth must surmount constant obstacles; it is the law in this world.

"My dear son, think about the glorious future of the Mission; we who project ourselves toward future times cannot really become alarmed. Success, here below, cannot be obtained without struggle.

"We understand your weariness but we do not have any more reassuring remarks to make. This world of Maya is what it is: fraught with pitfalls and disappointments. Keep confidence, nevertheless; we protect the very essence of our system, which nothing, and no one, can destroy. Time will provide it with its strength, which will be devoted to humanity, whatever the obstacles encountered.

"Slowness, delays are only incidents. Keep joy in your heart. When you come and rejoin us, you will work with us toward the grand future that is destined for this way, which we are working for."

Babuji