Sunday, June 14, 1998 - 11:30 a.m.

(In meditation.)

My daughter, you have understood the true meaning of devotion, tolerance, in every respect; it is the only way of advancing truly. One who never makes mistakes, who always understands that which is to be understood—the human being, by nature, is limited in this aspect. His open-mindedness goes hand in hand with his progress. Try to remain understanding, and in this state of mind. Any judgement is a brake on your evolution. You know that we want the best for you. You are and you must, more and more, become a headlight. A headlight should not make mistakes; when some trust is placed in them, they should not be mistaken any more. Remain sparing of words, and calm. We know that your sufferings affect your nervous state. We carry you, in a certain manner. Should we tell you again that we love you and that we follow the least of your steps? Be strong and happy, you know well that 'joy attracts grace'. Then, remain calm and smiling for the love of me."

The Medium: "Babuji?"

(He laughs loudly.)

"Share this with your good friends."

Babuji