Wednesday, May 5, 1999 - 10:00 a.m.

Each passing day leads you towards the goal. Throughout the way, gather the good things you can find. Fill your luggage with true values and immutable treasures.

"Crowns can be lost or stolen. Build up reserves that will open the doors to you, they are your major assets, irreplaceable for the beyond. Store up all that is possible, including small nothings, which may seem negligible. All is numbered.

"We would like you to become aware of the illusion of life. It is only a step —small or big—taken in a given direction. We would like you to perceive the subtlety of the work being done on you. We preen your wings to allow you to fly better. We strengthen them so that you can soar. These comments are colourful, but may not be meaningful.

"You should know that your Masters attend to every need, that each one of you receives what they need in line with the level of the request. We do not quicken the pace, but we give thanks when a soul aspires to rise and we can help it. That's all."

Babuji