Each person's belief should be respected; this is what is done in our way. There are so many ways leading to the goal. The starting point is a call of the soul, which is compelled to act to unite itself with the divine presence residing in it. Many do not understand it; they seek the Divine outside themselves. But the impulse is given; they advance on the path that will sooner or later lead them to the right place.

"They will go through various experiences before discovering what is suitable to them. One day, they will find the right way, that which they will consider as the best for them.

"Nobody should be rushed. The heart must be open enough at the beginning of any process to make the difference between what is right and what is not. What matters is to take the first step. When a soul awakens to God, it starts seeking and its search, one day or another, will take it where necessary. Time must do its work. Never consider yourself as the only holders of the truth—it is manifold. God, in his sublime greatness, has a thousand and one facets to attract the souls that are ready. He can pick, at the appropriate time, the most beautiful flowers from His garden and look after them with all the love He is capable of. Rejoice for belonging to the chosen ones and give thanks."
