Read again the beautiful texts of Kabir. Let your heart sing like him; he does it so well. Rise up above the lowness of this world, and only see the beautiful. See in each one, beyond appearances, the purpose of their successive incarnations. You should know that many 'missioned' beings come back to Earth to help this civilization to advance, by trying to make it evolve in the right direction towards more humanity.

"Technical skills are important up to a certain point. There comes a moment when it makes many men unhappy; such is currently the case. The era of growing robotization will not bring anything good to humans. What will they do in the future? They will be mere witnesses dumb with fear and dying of hunger. It should be necessary to stop this process and, finally, to think of all the beings living on the Earth.

"How will tomorrow's world be if this striking progress of science is not halted? Sooner or later, it will cause destroying effects for the planet.

"Time will come when, out of survival, many people will have to revert to ancestral habits. They will have to re-learn how to make do with very little and very simply.

"Progress does not necessarily bring happiness. There, like elsewhere, balance is not easy to find. Anything being done to the detriment of the creature is bad.

"Evolution, involution, are two aspects of the divine laws which manifest themselves since the beginning of time. Nothing can halt this process. Great civilizations of the past returned to nothing, so will others too. That is the way it goes, the humans will have always to follow this movement and adapt to it."
