You are a sincere and faithful daughter, your love is disinterested. Such is not the case for all those who follow the Master faithfully. Some always hope for favours or gestures of gratitude, which flatter their ego. There is everything and it takes all sorts to make a world; that avoids monotony in the human species.

"If you had the possibility of observing closely the other living species, you would find the same. You would be surprised by what occurs—it is sometimes amazing—not only among animals, but also in the vegetable and mineral kingdoms, in other forms of manifestation. So that is not specific to humans. Are they more sincere, those who follow the Master with eagerness and who will stop at nothing to see him? Not necessarily. They sometimes sacrifice a lot of things for that and they display so much shrewdness, it is a force that pushes them to act like that. It is necessary to let these various ways of doing be expressed.

"Others stand aloof and love in silence, without exteriorization of any kind. They are touching in their fervour and their humility; each one of you expresses yourself your own way. We who see the hearts, the depth of them, we often discover pure wonders in very discreet beings.

"Monotony does not exist among humans; the diversity of personalities is quite astounding sometimes. The Creator of all things had populated this Earth as He saw fit; it's up to us to adapt ourselves to that."
