Don't get worried for your son-in-heart, his path is all set, he is under high protections. He came on the Earth to fulfil a mission and will make his way in spite of the obstacles, which will keep standing on his road. There will be two of them to face up to things, which is a strong point in life. You know something of it since you have been supported in very hard moments of your existence. Two soul mates never meet again just by chance. It is a long term planning with a precise purpose.

"Mission or not, each incarnation has its raison d'être with its difficulties of all sorts. Life is the best school to make you progress, provided that you accept with gratitude to follow such a path. Wise people accept; the least wise balk, they slow down their step forward. A soul needs a lot of time and events to half-open its heart to the extent of being exposed completely to the beneficial rays of love.

"Be happy with your destiny. Give thanks for having been chosen to go through this experience; you are judged worthy of it. In desperate moments, never stop thanking God and your Masters; all that happens to you, good or bad, has its raison d'être. They follow you and carry you during the most difficult moments, without your realizing it, whereas you believe you are abandoned. Be blessed now and forever."
