Friday, July 23, 1999 - 8:00 a.m.

You see how sad it is to live with blinkers, like this couple in your family. Suppose you were in this frame of mind, believing in nothing, neither in God, nor in another life after this one. It's alarming; you were like that in other incarnations.

"Pray for them; they are nice, these youngsters. You must help them. How many souls are still at this stage! You see the remaining amount of work and why great beings become incarnate to make humanity advance. The work is enormous; it is like walking in an endless desert. It is disconcerting, when one takes part in this action.

"There is sometimes a crushing feeling, a painful despair in the face of the task to be achieved. Humanity is inching forward, we must make do with the results achieved, even if on certain days, they seem derisory to us in relation to the remaining task.

"We do not want to conclude with this pessimistic view of things. The pace of work is not as high as we would like it, but we have to be content with it and continue unremittingly by ensuring that many more souls open up to the divine light. It is the goal of all of us, incarnate or not, to see to the successful completion of this work.

"Help us by meditating and praying for spirituality to eventually dominate matter. May it transform the beings and the things, here below, definitely."

Babuji