Sunday, August 13, 2000 - 10:00 a.m.

My dear son,

'The best of your well-intentioned advisors are nevertheless human beings, with blinkers, feelings and emotions—because of that, they are mistaken in certain circumstances. Through this channel, we could establish, if we manage to convince you, a kind of 'middle way' capable of tipping the balance in terms of decisions that you must take concerning individuals or in complex situations. It is up to you to see and decide about the future of our project. We have, for the time being, a channel who is reliable and well prepared for this kind of communication. We do not want to impose anything on you, it is up to you to decide as you know, and we respect your way of doing. We suggest to you this possibility; that is all. As the Mission is expanding, problems are unavoidable. People are not easy to understand in terms of their cogitations and behaviour. Human beings have no real friends among their fellow creatures, they must therefore rely on inspirations from their own heart; they should however step back sufficiently from particular situations. We are close to you, my dear son, as we told you many times. So it will be until the end. Thereafter, will come the blessed day, when you come to rejoin us and delight in a well-deserved rest. We surround you with our love."

Babuji