Thursday, September 14, 2000 - 10:00 a.m.

Pure hearts understand instinctively. They don't need any long speech to feel the truth of our remarks. Divested of a superfluous intellectualism, they are granted the ability to grasp what is hidden beneath the words. This reading, done with the heart, is not accessible to all; it is the prerogative of souls matured under the fiery glow of love. Readers will not perceive these messages in the same way. Deemed insignificant, even disturbing by some people, according to others they will be able to touch in them the right chord, while helping them in their evolution.

"Each one will find therein what is necessary for them, even if the positive aspect of this reading cannot be felt immediately. Read and read them again if need be, until their hidden meaning unfolds to you in all its truth. We cite some people; we have to. We address human beings whom our remarks are meant for. We cannot abstract them from this fabric woven for them. All has its raison d'être; remaining in this abstraction would make the whole of it uninteresting. We know what we are doing; it's up to you to understand it."

Babuji