Monday, September 25, 2000 - 10:00 a.m.

The Medium: "Babuji, I am completely lost, this detachment worries me."

You should not; it is normal that such a transformation on the spiritual plane results in changes of behaviour. There is nothing worrying in bringing back one's life to the main thing. It is not necessarily pleasant to see one's fellow men with a more clear-sighted eye, but you don't delude yourself, it seems. Compassion must develop proportionally with this awareness. This is how mankind is and the Earth is an experimental field where all the species try to live, and some to survive —hunger, insecurity and fear being the lot of most of the beings populating this planet. The luckiest ones do not always realize what they have and not many of them care about the least favoured. This ceaseless game belongs to the karmic laws. Each one struggles in their own environment, hoping for better days—with many of them hoping for a beyond suited to their belief. Fearing the future is not a good way of approaching it. No one escapes their destiny; what they have come for must be lived through. Being in love and surrender is the best way of advancing in peace.

"Never forget that we will follow you, no matter what happens, and that we will wait for you, when times come."

Babuji