Whispers from The Brighter World

A Third Revelation

Sunday, March 17, 2002 - 10:00 a.m.

The science of the soul is the least explored. Man ignores this priceless richness. The approach to it does not follow the right direction, though knowing oneself well would be the least thing, before trying to penetrate the secrets of the universe. Man is afraid of going to the heart of things. Many of them do not believe in higher forces weaving the threads of their destiny. They are afraid of this kind of 'greatness', and unconsciously they try to escape it. They want to be autonomous, deciding their own life, which they believe they are conducting as they like. They want to know, believing that they can thus earn some power over the elements. By deciding to go and explore other planets, they only let a bad inner instinct of conquest manifest itself. To plant a flag, to dominate, monopolise a territory and to disturb unscrupulously the established order, that is the ideal that motivates them. Man would like to exercise his powers beyond this planet, the exploration of which has become banal. He has taken control of, ransacked and polluted everything. He does not discover with a view to respecting creation; for him, a virgin territory is a source of profit. His desire for space conquest partakes of this context."
