Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, October 19, 2015 — 10:00 a.m.

Love is an abstract concept in this world; what does the word really represent to humans? Are all of them aware of love's reality beyond the spheres of materiality? Love is a redeeming energy whose effects are very satisfactory and, above all, capable of producing the best. So much hatred and violence sully humanity; they generate wars and eternal conflicts between peoples and countries, which should instead unite to face up to things and grow in wisdom before the Eternal, a wisdom that fails to establish itself here below. Too little effort is made in this direction; good will is not lacking, but perfection is not yet the sought-after goal, and above all, it cannot be easily obtained.

"What is required to lead human beings to reason! It is better for now to face up to things and try, whatever the cost, to move towards a more just life by working on one's own advancement and behaviour — a behaviour capable of producing satisfactory spiritual progress. Our action is geared towards this, reaching levels that are beyond human perception. These messages are simplicity itself in their approach towards an understanding that is accessible to all. Would great literary texts touch people's hearts? Not all of them are in high demand. It is up to each one to find his or her 'way', in the true sense of the word."
