Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, November 19, 2015 — 10:00 a.m.

Hear only our voices. Forget all else — life in its material aspect and its consequences. Here lie peace and harmony, that which your heart calls for above all. A fervent and surrendered heart such as yours finds its way in serving the Divine. It is not spared; the miasmas of material life affect it and do not deal gently with it. This is how it is, one might say. Spare yourself, my dear daughter. Until the end you are giving us the best by taking down these messages with so much love, and by not putting yourself forward as is done elsewhere.

"We know this world. From here we can see it even better than when we were incarnate. No human action escapes us, you can be sure. Humility and loyalty are major qualities for us. They perfectly illustrate the basis for any commitment to an approach like the one we propose. Being divested of the unnecessary, [one should] go further and further in a state of surrender, love and trust in this extraordinary power that is beyond human perception. This is our work, our goal — to always go further in helping our brothers and sisters overcome that which keeps them riveted to the world of matter.

"When the subtle being opens up to divine splendour, the angels rejoice and sing the most beautiful songs. Those beings do exist — remember your first message from Janaki, to her very dear Parthasarathi, in which they were mentioned. Human beings are truly limited in their knowledge; essential aspects escape them, for good reasons inherent in the current level of evolution. Our brothers and sisters are advancing, and that is the main thing. We rejoice in this. This is how it is."
