Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, June 3, 2016 — 10:00 a.m.

Seeing only the beautiful, the good, contributes in some way to the elevation of humankind. On this point, there is much to do to improve oneself — such is the challenge of a person's life. This life is not easy for anyone. Being laden with trials to a greater or lesser degree, it provides the means to progress and move forward in this quest for the Divine that is so essential to each incarnate being. Becoming aware of this fact is already a sign of wisdom. So much time is lost in useless experiences that leave aside the most important aspects of an initiatory journey. Understanding its meaning and working towards the refinement of that which must be improved allows the best in every human being to emerge.

It takes time and many trials to understand the main thing; the real potential exists in oneself and is accessible when mind and heart unite to achieve the best possible result. An incarnation is short compared to eternity — a mere page of a book holding the secret of an entity on his or her initiatory journey. This aspect of life is little known, yet it is so important to know it and act accordingly. Following a spiritual path denotes true wisdom — a wisdom that is innate and had already left its mark in previous lives. This process is decisive in more ways than one. The great book of life gathers that which results from such a process and which constitutes a person's spiritual identity.

May all have faith and determination to move towards the Divine goal.
