Tuesday, August 5, 2003 – 10:00 a.m.

My daughter,

We have come a long way together to reach this ease of communication. Concerning what happens with these messages going forward, they will be facilitated by modern means of communication used by our faithful aspirants in processing them. The entire system is well set up. The current technology greatly serves our way. The words of the Master, our teachings, and the news of the Mission are disseminated regularly, developing bonds between our aspirants wherever they may be on Earth.

Their feeling of isolation has lessened and will continue to decrease thanks to the use of images, which our way should expand upon, thus providing information on the Master's travels and the life of the Mission in general. Human beings undergo annoyances resulting from the pollution brought about by these systems. Therefore, why not take maximum advantage of what they can offer? This idea should be developed. My son will undoubtedly put his mind to it. Thanks to his intellectual curiosity, he is already on the forefront of what is being done in this area. We will come back to this.

Each era has its own characteristics, and one must move with the times and adapt to what the era offers. In this, our Mission is not lagging behind. People's thirst for spirituality will grow. It will have to be quenched by putting at their disposal this advanced technology which human beings will become increasingly fond of. It will be able to provide them with clear and accurate information about what we can offer them. One should not be afraid of going further into this system. The new era will shake up all accepted ideas; we must anticipate and forge ahead.

Babuji