Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, April 17, 2017 — 10:00 a.m.

Time passes, and nothing really changes. It is necessary to adapt to the prevailing reality. The aspiration to the Divine is the only aspiration that does not change; the human being has this potential that asserts itself according to the circumstances and requirements of karma. These are disconcerting at times. How could the human being understand their complexities? The only option is surrender, such as we advocate here with utmost insistence.

Nothing great can be built without the ability to love, to allow the emergence of whatever must be in the course of an incarnation. Each incarnation is a link in the chain that constitutes the divine will and ultimately adjusts itself and produces the best possible, even if this reality does not appear to the eyes of human beings.

Following a spiritual path is a sign of wisdom; time allows one to become aware of it. It illuminates the path where the best can be accomplished. Surrendering to the Divine, to the incarnate Master, is the best option. When the time of assessment comes, one doesn't need to prove anything more, but only to fully enjoy the state of surrender — a privilege that transforms one's life.

This is how it is.
