To remain surrendered to divine Providence is the most beautiful act of faith offered by a loving heart – do not forget it, my child. Keeping the goal in mind amid the storms denotes fortitude of the soul that we wish all our aspirants to have.

To unify hearts, to make them vibrate with the same creative energy, is the profound reason for the birth of a way like ours. Under no circumstances would we like to see our aspirants going astray onto paths that arouse their curiosity. This would hinder their concentration, already disrupted by their current life, which is fraught with noise and all sorts of harmful disturbances.

Intellectual pollution is not welcome in our system; it is sufficiently widespread in this world without our adding to it erroneously.

The abhyasis of the future will not make this mistake; by themselves, they will be able to eliminate all that is not relevant to their spiritual process. Equipped with higher faculties, they will seek to grasp the truth in all its purity by focusing on what is essential.

It is up to my son, and the onus will be on his successor, to remain vigilant on this aspect for the good of our Mission.

This troubled period encourages humans to seek methods to help them understand themselves and find meaning in reactions and behaviours. Beware of interpretations coming from human [nature] and likely to be misleading rather than truly helpful.

Knowing where the reality of the being resides, and following a way of wisdom in order to appropriate it, remains the noblest struggle in this world. May all our abhyasis cease to doubt it, and may they follow the way without adding anything that is unnecessarily misleading.
