Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, September 16, 2012 — 10:00 a.m.

This day is a time of relaxation for many people; most of our brothers and sisters devote part of it to sadhana. Observing this pause is essential for them. Connecting themselves to the Divine under the authority of the spiritual Master is a major asset in such an approach. All receive according to their aspirations. We cannot force anything, but allowance for real advancement is possible on this journey. Uniting with the living Master, with the power of the sovereign Spirit, opens a space of purity and redeeming love. We can never stress this point enough: the practice in all its aspects is productive in more ways than one. Here, time reveals the true potential of each one; all should act accordingly. It is up to each one to map out their path, that which leads the way to realisation — the ultimate goal of the being. The essential point to be reached lies there, provided it is not lost sight of. So many people have no idea of who they are exactly, of the potential they hold, and of what their lives could be if they became aware of it. Achieving this level of perception of the real being is a promising start and allows them to pursue a process that can actually open the doors of the Sacred. Long is the path, yet so rewarding. Humans lose a lot of time in vain pursuits. Doors are open to them; it is still necessary to open the right one, but in such a process there is every hope of success. A day will come when the divine goal will be reached — that is our wish for all.
