Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, September 23, 2012 — 10:00 a.m.

Everything moves, everything changes around you, but this invisible flame that lives in your heart is immutable and constant in its effects. This domain is reserved in some way and protected from the ups and downs of life in the material world. Spiritual life is in itself a sacred island where the best can be accomplished for our truly committed aspirants. We see beings changing imperceptibly over time. Our abhyasis wonder what progress this method provides. It is not easy for them to measure its effects and yet these are revealed to them in certain circumstances and, above all, they remain productive on their journey. All Earthly goods are fluctuating; everything can be lost in an instant. Whether they are material possessions or loved ones, nothing can ever be taken for granted — this is worth considering. The only immutable good is that which is generated by a soul's journey. It lives on beyond an incarnation, and it is an inexpressible blessing for the subtle being that continues its journey elsewhere. A lifetime on Earth is short and its effects are limited; not frittering it away in vain efforts reveals the wisdom and disposition of a human being. There is so much to do here below; aiming for what is essential limits the loss of time. We wish the best for all. The way is open for our aspirants. It is up to them to conquer this rare pearl — that of bliss. We help them with that in more ways than one; thus are accomplished the wonders of the Spirit in these times when there is every hope for success in this aspect.
