To love, to love infinitely — is it not the best possible prospect for a committed heart? That joy has no equal. It leads the being to a state in which the soul exults.

Repetition is necessary. Words here are the nourishment, that which is suited to a process of this kind. This aspect of sadhana is important; it has always been so in a spiritual way, as in all things.

Here, as we have already mentioned, the advancement of our aspirants is notable. A field of beauty and love emanates from the hearts of our brothers and sisters. There lies the best result of this process in which more and more people are becoming involved.

Simplicity is the context in which energies are harmonised in the meeting places, from the smallest to the most gigantic gatherings. We do not have imposing temples, music or spectacular displays at the venues for gatherings and meditations. It all takes place at another level: the simplicity of heart and surrender to the Master and the higher powers. The latter have made possible this spiritual advancement, this setting into motion of the subtle energy capable of transforming beings in their approach to the Divine. There is a large variety of means. In its simplicity, Sahaj Marg operates in a manner coherent with the state prevailing at the dawn of a new era. Experienced hearts find the way that suits them and they advance at their own pace, according to an inner call. All are helped and supported in their sorrows and joys, although this is not really visible to the eyes of human beings. Our reasons are not theirs; they interpret in their own way and we in ours. All are strengthened and blessed; we support and love them in our own manner; such are the divine laws.
