Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, November 24, 2012 – 10:00 a.m.

Regain inner calm. So begins this ritual, as you know, where your attention is total. Channelling is not a rare occurrence. Little recognised in the West, it is nonetheless a reality. It is practiced at different levels according to a person's spiritual elevation, and even then, not everyone achieves the highest degrees of it. Here we are in a special context; we will not go into details. You are, and will remain, the scribe chosen by the hierarchy. Everyone has a role here below; life plans are predetermined, and everyone must devote themselves to it in their own interest. A heart totally surrendered to God has a place apart; it finds its way, as its incarnation favours that predetermined role. Divine laws – let us repeat it once more – cannot be circumvented; human reasons have no bearing on them. All must adapt to the role reserved for them by trying to fulfil it as best they can. Some people have visions of grandeur and believe they are worthy of exercising any power, but nothing works that way. Everyone must accept what is entrusted to them with gratitude and, if possible, with humility. There lies the true greatness, the innate wisdom, that which accepts and is thankful for graces received.

A spiritual journey helps human beings fulfil themselves in terms of their elevation; for that they must divest themselves of their most cumbersome burdens. Some burdens are particularly heavy; the objective is precisely to shed what is useless, anything that hinders the progress of the seeker. Time is running out and it cannot be made up for.

Doing one's best in everything, with the proper disposition of heart, saves valuable time. Goodwill and sincerity draw our attention, and we act accordingly. Everything is possible; it is up to each one to truly want it and to fully engage in this way of love.

Blessings.
