Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, December 6, 2012 – 10:00 a.m.

What are we – a breath, a nothing, and nothing more. This quote is very true; it sums up the situation perfectly. In the face of eternity, humans are an element of very small importance, and yet they exist for reasons that cannot be explained here. This whole whirlwind of life is characteristic of this world. Life on Earth is unique; each planet has its own form of life, which will be revealed in the future. Humans are not currently ready to receive this teaching. Beings who are much more evolved live elsewhere and they carefully observe this world, concerned by the turbulence induced by humans with regard to the general equilibrium. It will take a long time for this truth to be accepted. Human beings are not the only ones and especially not the most evolved. As the saying goes, some things are better left unsaid; we are venturing here into a register that is not usual. The writing process we are using here with these messages is not accepted by all, and yet all the spiritual Masters of the past have turned to it, something which is still little known today. Regardless, not progressing in the understanding of phenomena is harmful to humans. We have no magic wand; time does its work, they say. May all our abhyasis open up to a reality – one that some still reject today. Never mind, we are moving forward and acting for the good of all, for the awakening of understanding in our Mission. This Mission signals the way of the future, where its expansion will be very important. We must move forward and not stagnate in erroneous beliefs that do not prepare human beings to face what awaits them.

May all be blessed and enlightened.
