Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, January 7, 2013 – 10:00 a.m.

The cycles of life renew themselves. They bring about some changes over time; such are the divine laws regarding its current evolution. All can change, and all will change in due course; humans, and life as a whole, need that stability. The transformations happen in a very subtle way, just as needed in this transitional era in which other rules – beyond the current ones – will prevail on Earth for the good and for evolution at all levels.

Other planets, contrary to what humans believe, are much more advanced, and moreover, they don't believe they are the only ones that support life in different forms. Minds evolve slowly, commensurate with the movements generated by this cosmic force upon which the total balance of creation depends. Each planet has its own rhythm, a little like humans in some of their behaviours. Upheavals are not errors, but necessities; they maintain a certain balance in the general order. Some renewals are necessary, thus does the great established order impose its laws. How can humans, in their smallness, understand this need for change? Transformations have always recreated life. The hereafter, as you call it, also has strict rules where fantasy is excluded and the laws are very subtle, but this is another matter.

May everyone follow their path while trying to do their best. A spiritual way like ours is given to humans of this time for their greatest good. It is up to them to take full advantage of it; that is how it is.
