Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, August 17, 2013 – 10:00 a.m.

Be at peace; what must be will be. Everything changes in this world, and yet the divine laws are immutable and the destiny of each individual inescapable. It takes time for humans to understand where the true path lies, far from violence, greed and all human baseness. Seeing only the beautiful, aspiring for the best – for oneself and for all aspirants – has a positive effect. May it one day spread over all the Earth, leading human beings back to reason and away from incessant acts of violence, of war between countries and between people of the same race and the same ethnicity. How can it still be like this? Following a spiritual way like ours should change everyone's behaviour. Is this happening? What should be eradicated from the being is gradually removed through the constant cleaning that is being done. There is still so much to do; we can see certain egos manifesting in an unacceptable way among some of our aspirants. These times are difficult; may the best emerge for our Mission so that a glorious future may be reserved for it. It is said that perfection is not of this world, but the attempt to attain it is already promising. May all our abhyasis take stock of themselves, of their tendencies, but also and above all, of their deep yearning to attain the highest level of consciousness. Materiality must be dealt with, and it should not impede one's progress towards the only goal worthy of attainment. That is what we firmly hope for all.
