Regardless of the teaching provided, repetition is necessary. That is the real movement of life in all its expression. The human being of today is no different in terms of his or her inner nature, even if the modern means of communication can disturb one's balance somewhat due to the intensity of the demand in this domain. This should be considered. Setting aside time to read these writings can surely provide some serenity in this very agitated world. One's innermost nature calls for this, and devoting the necessary time for it is the best way to perceive what is essential in life.

Mystics of all times have been able to set aside a space conducive to this practice of meditation, fostering a deep interiorisation. There lies the aim: to search for the best of one's self, far from all the negative aspects of this Earthly existence. It has become more and more complicated by so-called progress which is often so unsettling for humans, not to mention negative. Setting aside a time for meditation, calmness and reflection on the true meaning of life is very rewarding at this level. It takes time to understand it and to adjust oneself to this higher reality capable of weaving the destiny of every human being! Is the complexity of life really understood by all humans? Few of them comprehend it or even care about it. Everyone does what they can within their physical and intellectual means and an appropriate spiritual dimension. May all our brothers and sisters become aware of the opportunity granted them here to progress and to save valuable time by adjusting themselves to an effective method – one that can result in the best for their spiritual upliftment.
