The teachings of great beings sent by God that influenced humanity have been distorted by men. That is particularly true for the teaching of both Jesus and Muhammad, which in the beginning was a code of life, love and respect for one's fellow man.

"What has become of it? For centuries, it has given rise to repression, extremist activities and a feeling of guilt maintained among followers, creating a system of material compensation for the maintenance of the respective representatives of these movements. These religions have given and are still giving a pretext for all excesses.

"When will men understand that a unique God governs the universe and that as such, a piece of this God dwells in them? The challenge to be taken up is to find this sanctuary within themselves. It is enough to seek Him with determination, far from blinding dogmas.

"If inspired by his own wisdom, when he really wishes so, man finds the suitable guide for his profound aspiration."
