Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, October 3, 2013 – 9:30 a.m.

This is the moment when everything calms down, when your heart exults in loving, as it so well knows how to do. In that moment, worries associated with this world, as well as with the many problems inherent in this material life, are overcome. Spirituality is the true refuge. It brings about serenity and necessary hindsight when one is fully committed. It is perfectly possible to combine an active life and this practice; one has only to decide and to organise oneself accordingly. Great mystics have succeeded in doing so and are still doing so in these times of increasing turmoil and diversion from real values. These values are and will remain a definite anchor, one that is so very important for humans facing the hazards of an incarnation.

Anything is possible. Our path has valuable assets and it can lead aspirants to levels they could not dream of. There lies reality; the long-term results prove it. We are very happy for all of our brothers and sisters who participate in this divine feast. Time brings about significant results, in keeping with the laws of evolution in this world. The obscurantism of the past is far behind us, and yet there is still a long way to go before minds reach a degree of openness that is both desirable and required for a significant transformation. That transformation will come with much suffering and multiple experiences, but also a desirable commitment of the heart. Nothing is simple; advancing in this direction requires effort, but the result is worth it.

To all, our ceaseless blessings.
