Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, March 20, 2014 – 10:00 a.m.

Nothing is ever simple in this world where disturbances sometimes allow for necessary readjustments. A spiritual way is not spared; this is in the order of things, one might say. Nothing is created, nor does anything evolve, without turmoil. Sometimes this is precisely what enables events to become clearer. As we have said before, our Mission spans the continents, and, thanks to modern means of communication, it has not taken centuries to accomplish this feat. What is desired by the higher powers is being realised, one way or the other. What must be will be; our Mission has for many years been a testament to this. A guiding thread is being followed – the alliance of Masters protecting this Mission provides for it. Being thus monitored, the Mission advances and produces in hearts what is necessary for the welfare of such an organisation, on both the human and spiritual planes.

This path is important; its impact continues to grow and is not about to stop. The current era calls for changes involving a necessary rigour. Disorder is not constructive. Yet it sometimes permits realignment to a course of action that is necessary and conducive to the very special work being done in this way of the heart, so subtle in its effects. This Mission does not exist in vain. It will definitively mark this transitional period between the world as it is and as it will become in the future; this will be for the good, and for a true human evolution. More than ever, the need is being felt to change many aspects of this world. The higher powers operate in their own way, which is not always that of humans. In this, trust and surrender remain more desirable than ever.

Blessings to all.
