Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, April 8, 2014 – 10:00 a.m.

Human beings are truly not easy to understand; they aspire to knowledge, but it is most important that we do not unsettle them by going too far. What to do? Time itself will have to bring to light what must be made evident. We are preparing this future as best we can, by gradually identifying the essential points. The era of obscurantism will one day be left behind, and the people of Earth will advance as needed towards a more just humanity – one that is in accord with the major elements determining a pre-planned and inevitable evolution. For millennia, unimaginable upheavals have been occurring, and yet the Earth is still turning and humans have always adapted by force of circumstance. Everything moves and evolves imperceptibly. That is how it is on Earth, and it is not about to change. Neither are human beings transforming dramatically, but many changes are taking place in their molecular makeup. Today's humans are no longer like the cave-dwellers, and tomorrow's humans would truly surprise those of today. Minds must open to a reality that will one day catch up with them. Ignorance limits humans to their smallness; the laws of life will one day lead them where they need to be, without asking their opinion. So it goes. A day will come when the truth will be revealed on this Earth; let us go ahead with this in mind. May all be strengthened and enlightened for the benefit of each one.
