Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, January 15, 2015 – 10:00 a.m.

Events are following one after the other, and the 'sacred river' of Sahaj Marg follows its course, as planned by the higher powers. Nothing is done without their goodwill – a human being is so small before them. Realising this is edifying; trying to ignore it is truly distressing. The passing of the torch in the Mission is taking place quite simply, one may say, while respecting all that must be complied with in the tradition of a spiritual path, now well established in the world of humans. There is still much to do to take it to the highest. This grand building under construction [in Hyderabad] will become an important reference point, symbolic of what the Mission has now come to represent in the lives of many human beings. Time is passing, minds are opening slowly, but what must happen will happen.

May all our brothers and sisters realise the importance of their commitment and the possibility, through Sahaj Marg, of making progress in this incarnation. It is up to them to seize this opportunity; they will not regret it. When the time of assessment has come, theirs will not be negative, since they are offered a space of peace and harmony – one that is beyond human harassment, where they can replenish themselves and truly unite with the Divine, under our blessings.
