Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, February 18, 2015 – 10:00 a.m.

The Mission, like any human being, must adapt to the course of life even if it cannot avoid certain obstacles. Nothing is simple, ever. To do one's best, in a state of surrender to the Master, is wisdom itself. Respecting the laws, the basic rules of life, helps one progress and understand the need to rise spiritually. All is pointless, except for this notion of the Divine, still so much ignored on this Earth where violence takes on dramatic proportions leading to dire consequences. While not going into the material aspects of life in this world, we cannot remain insensitive to certain facts. A perfect world is not for tomorrow, and certain limits should not be crossed. May people come to their senses and no longer thus defy the universal laws. Blessed are the wise beings aware of the presence of the Divine within themselves and respecting the rules that are necessary for their own good.

A spiritual path like ours works for the good of this suffering humanity. In our own way, the practice of Sahaj Marg contributes to this spiritual evolution that has become truly essential for the good of all – in this world and beyond. The laws of life have their mysteries and are to be observed to maintain a general balance. Much remains to be done. It is important to remain confident; one day the divine goal will be reached – it cannot be otherwise. Let us all work for this, carried by the powerful waves of love; this one is constructive.

Blessings to all.
