Do you believe that I did not have 'to endure' with my family? My sons made me suffer a lot. From life to life, we have to settle accounts with one another, without really knowing why. All these frictions are useful to our development. They encourage us more and more to go inside ourselves and find therein the strength to put up with sometimes difficult contacts with others; they can also, afterwards, give rise to beneficial reactions for us. One should take advantage of all experiences, good or bad. Therefore, whether you still consider her as your daughter or not, you have a karmic bond which cannot be untied by a statement. Nobody is perfect; biological daughters would have perhaps created other problems for you. You suffered enough from this in previous lives.

"Believe me, you are privileged. But, remember that it is not enough to repudiate someone for the situation to improve. Carry on your way; leave these minor incidents behind you. Take refuge in the sadhana; you have not understood this truly. The main thing lies elsewhere, far from all these daily life annoyances. They are meant only to let us better taste the joy of uniting with the Divine. Think well on this."

The Medium: "Babuji, I am not well."

(Usual ill being.)

"That is nothing, meditate. You will feel better afterwards."

Babuji

(I actually felt better afterwards.)
