Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, November 7, 2015 – 10:00 a.m.

Let yourself be carried away on the wings of love, a love that glorifies a life by giving it all its meaning. Blessed are the hearts that are eager to love and determined to progress. What can remain of an incarnation that could be more important, apart from this very special energy that lifts up the soul to its highest destiny. So many aspects are to be considered in this area. Humans are so often carried away by the wave of illusion, the attraction of multiple opportunities offered to them that do not lead to what is essential. A pure heart always ends up finding its way, sometimes after many struggles and mistakes; who doesn't commit them! This world is not one of perfection – far from it. Such Edens exist, but they have yet to be reached.

There is much to do; each incarnation offers sufficient proof of this. Spiritual Masters are not spared. They too are sometimes taken advantage of by malicious spirits who know how to deceive their fellow beings. All this is the game of life. Everything is counted, down to the smallest detail, and recorded in the divine ledger – one that cannot be circumvented, nor can a person conceal anything from it, which is comforting to know. So many behaviours are loathsome, and in such cases one should move on and forget these kinds of torments. Our brothers and sisters will understand these comments.

Who in this world is spared! May all realise the transience of a life and do their best to save precious time.

The best to all.
