Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, November 15, 2015 – 10:00 a.m.

Peace on Earth among humans and for the good of all – that is what would be decisive for the balance of humanity. Hatreds are not constructive; they seriously hinder the expansion of consciousness and keep humankind in a dismal stagnation at all levels. Transcending those situations – definitively – would mark a very important step for the good of all living beings. Advancing in that direction, freed from the useless, would clarify once and for all the status of the human race; this world is far from perfection. May a general awareness allow people of good will to look to higher and nobler aspects, and thus liberate humankind. How many more centuries will it take to clear up the situation and ennoble human beings on their Earthly journey – a journey that could provide them with so many constructive benefits at all levels.

The only aspiration of the soul is to rise above the miasmas of this materiality that leave the human being overly bogged down in a state of disconcerting negativity. We are constantly working in this direction – one that truly matters to us and that seeks to change, even on a limited scale, this situation that is distressing in many respects. Let us not despair. One day the divine goal will be reached and a wave of love will be able to engulf this world rather than see it annihilated for reasons that would then prevail.

Special blessings to all.
