Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, November 22, 2015 – 10:00 a.m.

Acceptance is necessary and decisive on this Earthly journey where everything is counted and evaluated according to criteria that escape human reasoning. The complexity of life is great – boundless, one might say. Human beings must be content to do their best and learn as much as they can through their personal experience with the multiple trials that are reserved for them. Good moments are precious breaks; they are strengthening, and they allow one to have a more objective view of all that must be experienced. Embarking upon a spiritual path opens up perspectives that would otherwise remain unknown. To develop love within oneself – a love that truly elevates the soul far from all the depravity of this world – is a promising life choice. This asset is precious. Even if it is not easily assessed, it produces the best results in this kind of process. Repetition is necessary, these messages are the proof of it. We revisit the same topics, and for good reason; human beings quickly forget and move on, as you say. Here, the topic is different. It is good to immerse oneself each day in these values that are not invented and that are decisive in an incarnation. From one lifetime to the next, experiences occur that add good or bad aspects to the karma of each person. Everything is justified, you can be sure. To advance towards the goal is the objective here, for the best of reasons. We wish the best to each and every one in their personal aspiration.
