Whispers from The Brighter World

Surrender – that is what determines the path and progress of the abhyasi; by breaking free from its chains, the being reaches the goal more easily. There lies an Eden, the best that can be, and reaching it is the most beautiful attainment. So many incarnations have made you what you are today. It takes much time and multiple trials to reach the stage of current understanding. This achievement is precious, you can believe it; a life is not simple and it can be harsh, at least in appearance, since trials are so necessary to a person's journey. Acceptance saves time, averts confrontations and sometimes clarifies situations that are hard to accept on the human level. The school of life has no end. Until the very last, it plans out everything in such a way that it could not be otherwise. When the time of delight comes, all current ills will lose their significance.

To advance in the way of 'Love' – this very subtle energy capable of generating surprising and edifying results for the remainder of this journey – is it not the most beautiful achievement. Attaining it is a rare blessing; it is prepared, for each one, under our blessings and with a steadfast and fervent practice, one that leads to the delight of the soul, for our greatest joy.

Special blessings to all.
