Wednesday, July 12, 2000 - 10:00 a.m.

Don't be overwhelmed by human misery and the sufferings of your fellow man. You should be compassionate and help him as much as possible, but you cannot do more than that. Thus are the karmic laws; thus will they be until the end of the times. The Earth is a place of transition and awakening. Each being must solve a personal equation; he is alone in the face of his destiny. He can receive help and see his burden becoming lighter, but his lifeline will be followed until the end. A true spiritual process opens horizons to him, which can make the situation evolve favourably by modifying it. Man has options in the face of various paths presenting themselves to him; will he take the right direction? That is the question. He prefers, often, to choose easiness. Each one of his acts is numbered; until the end, he has his free will. Will his profound aspirations prevail? It is up to him to decide. We wish the best for each incarnate being and we all work in this direction."

Babuji