Wednesday, July 19, 2000 - 10:00 a.m.

Why do you think that you don't deserve the graces you receive? Only we can be the judges. My dear child, perfection does not exist in your world. Tending towards it is already a good process. Where does merit lie? Who can judge about it? Nobody. None of you has the ability to judge your brother. You must first look at yourself, observe yourself with attention, without weakness, and then you can draw the necessary conclusions. If one is honest, they have quite enough to do with their own person before turning to their neighbours and criticizing them; this attitude is common practice among you. Be wary of being in judgement. There is nothing more frightening than that. The yardstick you utilize will be turned against you. Be in peace with your circle; make efforts to rid yourself of an attitude that can only harm you.

"We had today to revert to this important aspect. In all your conscience, whoever you are, you cannot afford to play the judges; that would backfire on you. Think about it."

Babuji