Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, March 31, 2017 – 10:00 a.m.

The laws of Karma cannot be circumvented, they defy time and all human plans. Thus they assert themselves in a strategy that is difficult to grasp. What can a human being do in the face of them other than accept in the most beautiful surrender. Happy periods in life are not measured at their true worth – how could they be? Acceptance is the only way out of this long progression. What is acquired over the course of incarnations is precious and constitutes a real asset, decisive for the rest of the journey. Following a spiritual path broadens the horizon; what discoveries it allows one to make – they have their own importance, you can believe it. A moment comes on this Earthly journey when everything truly takes on its importance.

Each of the gains in a life is precious; this constitutes an endless chain through which a person's Karma can be accomplished. May the best be.
