Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, February 21, 1999 – 9:30 a.m.

The Medium: Babuji, my life will have been quite insignificant.

Do you know who you really are? Look beyond the veneer of a fleeting incarnation. What you are as an embodied being is not important; what you are spiritually, yes, that is. The personality helps fulfill one's own destiny. It is useful and appropriate for the role we have to play. The beggar has his own importance, the king too. The former can be a great illuminated soul and the other a traitor. One should never be attached to appearances but see only the divine nature that is in everyone and is not necessarily visible. Human criteria are saddening; you all are always more sensitive to a person's credentials than to their deeper qualities. Maya manifests itself particularly at this level, in all of you. You will respect a prominent person and look condescendingly on the poor fellow who represents nothing in your eyes. Here also, reconsider your values; do not enter this system of human classification. Respect the beggar as much as the personage you admire the most.

God cherishes all his children. He takes them through various stages necessary for their evolution, without demeaning them. Your criteria are altogether different from ours; try to understand this. Be happy to invite the poor person to your table; he might be a lord who is hiding his treasures. Illusion manifests itself in all aspects of life on Earth; it is what characterises it.

The planets are like each one of you: they have their unfortunate tendencies.

Never be judgmental. Your brother is following his path, you follow yours. Life on Earth is never without thorns; sooner or later, you go through difficult stages. They are useful and should make you aware of the fragility of beings and things to which you are so strongly attached. Focus on what is essential: the ups and downs of life are only there to make us aware of what is important, that is to say, the Divine. When all souls have become open to reality, this planet will no longer have its raison d'être.

Cosmic laws govern the universe for the good of the smallest atom in it. The divine laws are always right; trying to understand them is part of today's reflection. Be united and respectful of each other. That's all for today.

My son J-M is going through a difficult phase of his life. He must rebuild himself morally and define himself better, in order to project himself effectively into the future.

He will eventually emerge from these long years of difficulties and finally find serenity. His Himalayas are inside himself. He will come out strengthened from this long process that will lead him to wisdom.

We follow them both. Blessings to all.
