Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, April 24, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

Get out of your worries, elevate yourself, come join us.
See how beautiful everything is. Rest for one moment by my side.
You must remain an example of courage and faith.
Do not suffer from being misunderstood, what does it matter.
We do cherish you; you should hold firm, my child.
You are our preferred scribe, you know it. I hope you have no doubt about it. You are really a case, so many gifts and so little self-assurance, you intrigue us.
That is part and parcel of the personage, we will not change it.
Resume the presentation of these messages; do not delay too much. We appreciate the goodwill of all the team for the work done.
Convey my thanks and blessings to them.

"Unless you become like little children, you will never enter the kingdom of heaven." (Gospel, Matthew 18:3)

You should all regain the simplicity of childhood, the impulses of the heart, and not be afraid to express your love, in whatever form it may be.

Drop your middle-class education standards – this intellectualism that limits you constantly and hinders your advancement.
