Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, May 7, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

The life of a Master is centred solely on service. It is a total gift of self.

May you all draw inspiration from this destiny to act for your part with the same rigour, if you have the strength.

Think of what the life of your Master is – without rest, ever; sleeping little, between the material and the spiritual work; a life of abnegation offered to God and to his own Master for your good.

We draw your attention to the role of such a being, so that you may, at least for a moment, come to realize its importance.

I ask you all once again: love him. He returns it amply.

The post-seminars are important. You must integrate all that you have received.

It is through meditation that you assimilate. The three stages – preparation, during and after – have their importance.

Just as water permeates slowly into the ground, divine energy is infused within you. Your assistance is necessary, you must accompany this work.

In this way, nothing is lost.

Your development is taking place imperceptibly, but irreversibly.

It is in the order of things. Meditate on this.
