Thursday, August 10, 2000 - 10:00 a.m.

True love, in a couple, entails selflessness which values the other; it is what your François has said so well, and it is what you lived together. Divine love is also an exchange: total surrender, absolute confidence and unconditional devotion. These three aspects are essential; they form the cornerstone on which is built a solid and sustainable relation. When the soul reaches this point of no return, there's no limit to what we can hope for. The union between the Creator and the creature is established; there is no need to revert to it, one has only to advance, without trying to understand truly the secrets related to this commitment. This capital must be preserved at all costs; it is the dearest good you can possibly have. Made of precious stones, it represents your divine legacy. Be attentive to this personal process, to the instructions given to you in the secrecy of your heart. Only you can decode them—no human being, however close to you, can access this sanctuary—and only you possess the key of it."

Babuji