Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, July 9, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

Try not to let yourself be deeply affected by the current events related to you. Your situation of dependence makes you vulnerable and we understand your reactions. The waves must appear on the surface and not reach the depths.

My dear child, we carry you, in a way, but life is like that; one receives blows, the bruises to the heart hurt, and calmness returns after the storm.

Nothing is immutable here below; everything breaks or changes, no situation is stable. We know how strong you are and what you have undergone in your life. You have always reacted courageously in the face of difficult trials. We know that once again you will overcome this distress related to the events of these past few days.

Your loved ones must go on their way, even if it means leaving this Earth. Other experiences are awaiting them elsewhere, on other planes, no more and no less than if they were to go to the other side of the world, with no possibility of communicating with the 'mobile'... You know that all this is part of the rules here below. Besides channelling, another form of communion can be established through the heart and the mind.

Don't be severe with this boy who is in an inextricable situation; he has only you to help him, all the other doors are closed to him. He is fragile and might do something foolish. You have the gratitude of his guide. You are doing your level best with him and with the others. You are not always understood. No matter what, everything is written in the great book of time.

Act for the good and according to your heart, as you do for this boy, and without being judgemental.

Try to find serenity, my child.
