Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, July 15, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

It was agreed that this collection would be comprised of much backtracking on many points already addressed, a kind of general rehearsal.

You have come a long way, and we are satisfied, although these messages are reserved for a privileged few. We see their impact; to some extent, you serve as guinea pigs... You respond well; it happens that our criticisms make you bristle, but common sense regains the upper hand. You are good subjects:

The test is conclusive.

It's important to know that the more you refine yourselves, the more you call this subtle energy we just spoke of. It permeates you more and more and releases you from this heavy vibration that holds you down, a little like a hot air balloon remaining stuck in place, for lack of ability to unload. This refining is not achieved without difficulty, more for some than for others. Many factors come into play that are not under the control of your will, except for your perseverance in the practice.

In any case, always do your best; be surrendered to the divine will.

The Master knows where you come from and where you are going; trust him completely. He knows what he is doing with each one of you, otherwise he would not be the Master.

Have faith in him, it is my request to you, and I give you my blessings.
