Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, July 16, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

What is important – and I can never come back to this enough – is to respect others, your brother, your sister. Differences are necessary. They sometimes cause friction which, if well understood, will move you all forward. You are in this great spiritual current that must unite you, above all else.

Never lose sight of that. Yes, unity must be your strength, it must build the future of the Mission; hard disparities and divisions would weaken it. It must be stronger and stronger to face the events that will inevitably occur in the world and within our own organization.

You must remain united under all circumstances. Imagine the day when my son too will leave this world; it will be time to stick together, especially.

We repeat often enough that there should be no attachment to the physical person of the Master, but it is only human. Many will not accept this, and that will cause an unsettling movement for some time.

The strongest will have to reason with the others about this occurrence and all else that may happen.

Remain confident and united, we will never repeat it enough.

You say you love us, so, prove it.

Babuji