The wheel is turning; there will be happier days when you won't have to worry about housekeeping. You are not spoiled at the moment, but these are the vagaries of life. Let this not affect your morale. You have enough to feed yourself on, my child, which is not, as you know, the case for many human beings.

Your sufferings have a completely different effect; the precious stone changes and takes on a beautiful brilliance, with which we are satisfied.

Above all, don't think that we observe you all to criticize you; we have already explained ourselves on this issue. We simply want to mark the ground you are walking on with a straight white line, which will keep you from swerving off course, so that you can go as quickly as possible to the goal. Is that what you really want? We don't judge you, and we don't wait sadistically for an opportunity to criticize you for one reason or another. We have other things to do; we love you all, quite simply. You've entrusted your spiritual lives to us; what could be more normal on our part than to point out what you all should avoid doing and what you should try to change in yourselves to facilitate your journey? Isn't this the normal behaviour of an affectionate father?

We are on a special life course; we want you to have the right assets for what you have set out to do, that is to say, a true spiritual process.

You have made a good choice. We ask you to understand the reasons for our remarks; they go in the right direction, that of love, which must illuminate your life.
