Monday, June 11, 2001 - 8:00 a.m.

The Medium: "Babuji, are you satisfied with this exchange with your son?"

It seems you know the answer. The time is ripe – after all these many years – for this collection of messages to be known to him. He is not expecting such a wealth of so diversified messages. By discovering this secret garden, he will find me. I will not be by his side physically, but at each moment these written words will strike his mind and will accompany him as the days go by. Thus, he will feel less lonely when he feels his burden is too heavy. All was meant to lead to this step; only you could trigger it. When your meeting together is possible, a great step will have been taken. The process is underway; my son is cogitating seriously about the best way of proceeding. Spare yourself, my child, do not misuse your strength; the previous days were testing and yet very productive. You can rest and, especially, look after yourself."

Babuji