Birthday of Babuji Maharaj – Message 1

Birth anniversaries of the Masters of our Mission are all holy days, and therefore, they should be particularly respected and venerated. What are three days in a year! Is it too much to ask? ...

They all have great importance: they represent moments of pause and reflection on the reality of a spiritual approach like ours. It is not about parties, copious feasts, presents or any other human event. Rather, these anniversaries bring together our abhyasis, who thus take the time to assess the meaning of this path, their personal commitment and the goal they wish to achieve. These moments are important for us, and more so for them; nothing is done in vain in our way. It is a very sure way, marked with these days that are so very sacred – more so than our aspirants can imagine – and they reflect the higher power. This is about a sacred code; it brings light to the path of the seeker through these pauses capable of leading one to a personal reflection on the reality of both one's life and an approach that is important for one's spiritual elevation. These days honour the Masters and the entire Mission. They focus on a reality that still eludes so many humans. Time cannot be made up; it would be unfortunate to let those days slip by without giving them the attention they deserve. Also, may all our brothers and sisters realise that taking the time to pause, wherever they are and according to their possibilities, implies the availability of their hearts. The respect and love they can feel on these days are indicative of a real commitment.

May these seminar days bring out the best in everyone, in a state of respect and love for others, brothers, sisters, all on the difficult path of life – hence the need to commune in this very special vibration, in the love offered to the Master who is revered on this day.

Such a birth anniversary is not insignificant. It glorifies our entire Mission and attracts the blessings of higher powers. These blessings are special. We wish that all our committed and sincere aspirants unite with us, with the Divine and the best of the being – namely, that divine energy which they carry within themselves without really being aware of it.

May all awaken to the higher reality: such is our goal, our wish, hence the importance of these landmark days in a blessed way like Sahaj Marg.

May these days have a profound influence on people's hearts; such is our ardent wish on these days that are very special for each of our aspirants.

To all, our special blessings.
